F. J. GREENSTREET, EDITOR & PROP.
 VOL. I. No. 18
 THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 10, 1903

The "Cold and frozen north" has at last placed itself right before the outside world. It is doubtful if any other country will be so directly benefited by the World's Fair.

Canada previous to this has been almost unknown, looked upon with contempt by our American neighbors, and in a great measure, unappreciated by her own citizens. It is gratifying to know that all this is no longer possible. The people of the United States have been taught a very useful lesson, though it is very humiliating to be compelled to take second place after being so long "the best in the world." The Canadian people have come to realize that they have a country of which they may well be proud, while victory after victory in the prize competition in various departments has astonished the world. But perhaps the most important part of all this is the fact that our own people are rapidly developing a national spirit, and pardonable national pride. No Canadian can look upon the present condition of the country, and compare it with others that have been regarded as more highly favored, without feeling that we have much cause for faith in and love of our fair Dominion.

On Sunday, Sept. 13th, the Rev. Mr. Fortness called a meeting of those interested in church matters, for the following Tuesday evening, to consider the advisability of erecting a church. Quite a goodly number responded to the notice, in which the Presbyterians were conspicuous by their absence. After opening with prayer, Mr. Fortness gave at length his reasons for calling the meeting, and invited the fullest discussion. After a general discussion Mr. Wm. Wood moved that steps be taken to erect a church. Mrs. Wood seconded the motion, which, when put, was defeated, seven to three. The Rev. gentleman did not seem satisfied, and gave notice that he would call a meeting of the members and adherents of the Presbyterian church, to discuss the matter. This he no doubt did, as not more than two Presbyterians voted against the motion, and he was led to believe that those who were not present were in favor of building a place of worship, and those who voted against it did so because they were not in a position to subscribe for a new building.

A Good Endorsement

ALMA, Sept. 11th. C. Doosheep is a well-known merchant here and of the highest respectability. His endorsement of any person or thing is, therefore, valuable. He told your reporter a couple of days ago that he had been cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills of the severe pains he suffered in his back for three years past. He has given practical proof of his belief in the efficacy of the pills by recommending them to several friends who have suffered as he did, and who are now using the pills and being benefited by them. It's the same good old story that is always told after any one uses this magic remedy.

A Thrilling Experience in India

ever thought of them, and how thoroughly regained my self-control."
 "Laboriously, very deliberately, I got my slight, and covered a spot
 with my hand, diagonally upward shoulder, low down. From the position I was in, I knew this would be the best position diagonally upward through the heart, and I have preferred to put a bullet into the brain, but in my disabled condition and awkward posture could not safely try it."
 "Just as I was ready, one of the cubs came forward, and my heart sank. The old tiger, and my heartplaymate, which sent it rolling to one side. The next instant I pulled the trigger, and the tiger fell."
 "My aim had not wavered a hair's breadth. The snap of the rifle was so slight, with a fierce yell from the tiger, and I was down. The tiger straightened itself up into the air.
 The cubs steered off in great confusion, and after almost an hour of meditation."
 "I sat up, and drew a long breath of thankful relief. The tiger lay beside me."
 "I was to wait to walk at once,
 so I leaned against the body of my playmate, and waited. The tiger was by this time setting up an angle which made me think little of my other injuries. Nevertheless the tiger was a magnificent animal, of exquisite color. So great was the reaction that the very sunlight seemed to transfigure him."
 "I now fairly smiled as I rapped the cubs on the mouth with my rifle barrel. I felt no inclination to shoot, but the cubs were so full of life, and more of their over-ardent attention.
 The animals soon realised this, and the cub on the right, the one who reached, evidently waiting for the mother to reduce me to proper submission."
 "I must have lain there half an hour, and my elation was rapidly subsiding before the agony in my back, and the pain in my man, my feet, appeared, tracking the tiger
 with stealthy caution."
 "I had not wanted to go for help,
 but I was so weak, and the tiger slept. His delight was so sincere and his courage in tracking the tiger was so unquestionable, that I doubted his waging a long fight."
 "The cubs on his approach, had run off into cover, so we set out on our way. The cub on the right there I was in a raging fever which with my wounds, kept me laid up for two months."
 "On my recovery I found that Gungeet had gone the next day and captured the two cubs, which he had taken to his den. The tiger had the skin of the old tiger was spread luxuriously on my lounge."

HOW THE QUEEN'S WASHING IS DONE.

All About the Royal Laundry.

It may not be generally known that the Queen has a special laundry, the staff of which is composed of a select contingent indeed to "pick a more picturesque spot than that occupied by the Royal Laundry on the borders of Richmond Park."

At the entrance to the drive is a pretty ivy-covered cottage, beyond which it is impossible for the unauthorized stranger to pass, as the Royal Laundry is almost as jealously guarded as the Bank of England, and the several kinds of sumptuous masses of red roses on either side arriving at the laundry, it is for the most part, but not exclusively, a two-story ivy-covered building, and entering it the usual smell of a laundry, and peculiar odor of washing is very much in evidence.

Along each side of the passage are large, ventilated cupboards, in which the several kinds of linens, in tons of which are bought at a great and tremendous chests filled with soda carbonate of soda are made to be seen.

The ordinary linen, consisting of towels, tablecloths, etc., arrives at the laundry in large square baskets. These are then emptied, the contents sorted, compared and checked by the person accompanying them.

The persons who receive the linen are sorted in a special room, the wooden boxes containing it being labeled with the initials of the person who delivered the owner's name and number of the box, such as "The Queen, 10," "The Princess of Wales, No. 2," etc.

The washing apparatus is of the most perfect and recent manufacture, the steam engines, grinders, mangle machinery in most complete order.

In every room under the stairs are cleanliness are observed, and different departments are marked with blackwork regularity and neatness.

When the clothes are properly dried, they are placed in big hampers, each heap belonging to a different palace.

Some of the linen is pretty much in red cotton, O. H., B. C., B. P., V. R. L. above, but some of the mangles are done with rubber heel stamps.

In the laundry, the date 1800 may be noticed on some of the tablecloths, which date of the linen is actually made for the Queen, and the signs are exceedingly pretty, indicating as they do ingenious work.

The Queen's linen is mostly of the rose, thistle, and shamrock, together with a number of Royal arms.

Some idea may be gathered of the extent of the Royal Laundry when it is mentioned that the Queen's annual bill amounts to very nearly £20,000.

Ringworm.

Ringworm is a contagious disease of nature, the growth produced by the growth in the skin of fungus. Its beginning and progress remind one of the spread of fire. It begins in a small spot, and spreads outward in a more or less circular ring of reddish inflammation, the center of the ring being a white spot, the center as it spreads outward, as the water in a pond, for its continuance at a single spot is soon exhausted.

At the center of the fungus, the hair is lost, and the back of the hands and feet are often affected.

Children contract it often from adults, probably because their skin is more tender, and because peculiar habits of the children, such as contact of the person in schools, or other places where children congregate, the disease is commonly spread by means of and other articles of clothing, and by combs.

When it attacks the scalp the hair usually falls out, and the scalp falls out. The ends next the skin are rough, as though bitten of gnawed off.

Once ringworm is parasitic in the origin, it might be supposed that measures of simple cleanliness would cure it, or prevent its occurrence; but while such means are necessary, spread to some extent, its thorough removal is effected only by remedial measures at the destruction of the parasite.

This is a much more heretofore than it should be if the growth of the fungus took place directly on the surface of the skin. It is therefore important that the treatment should be such as to destroy the peculiarities of the particular case.

It is the more important that professional advice should be sought. If the disease occurs in the scalp, it is often associated with a degree of scurf (dandruff) of insufficient nutrition, and the rapid and permanent recovery from the disease and disease are obtained when, in addition to proper medicinal treatment, the patient is kept in a healthy state for a time, though the distance is but slight.

Another in a recent medical review says that when ringworm appears in a school, rigid measures should be taken to prevent its spread, and that it is not only easily cured, is apt to recur, and, neglected, to become more or less chronic.—Youth's Companion

VALUE OF A TONNAGE POLICY.

Remarkable Cash Return, in View of the Fact that the Policy was on the "Ordinary Life" Form.

Rutland, Vt., April 13, 1893.

W. H. S. Whitcomb, General Agent, Burlington, Vt.

Dear Sir:—I am the holder of the 13th asking me if I have any objection to your quoting the results of my Equitable policy, has been received.

I am sure that you will find the following figures, and they ought to be of service to you in obtaining new business.

My policy is No. 81,380, and was issued May 27th 1873. It is a "Ordinary Life" policy for $1,000, with a yearly premium of $21.20.

The statement from the Equitable before me that I have the choice of cashing in the policy on the 27th of May next. For cash I may receive my policy for $1,000 and draw a cash dividend of $386.03; or I may surrender it for $1,200 of paid-up assurance, or I can surrender it for cash value, amounting to $1,200.

All About the First Lady

It may not be generally known that the Queen has a special laundry, but such is the case, and it would be difficult indeed to pick a more picturesque spot upon which to occupy by the Royal Laundry on the borders of Richmond Park.

At the entrance to the drive is a pretty ivy-covered cottage, beyond which it is impossible for the unauthorized stranger to pass, as the Royal Laundry is almost as jealously guarded as the Bank of England, and the drive itself in summer time is rendered almost impassable by the great masses of red roses on either side. Arriving at the laundry, it is found to be a large but rather unpretentious building, the interior of which entering it the usual smell of soap and soda pervades to "washing day" and the usual sound of the mangle.

Along each side of the passages are large, ventilated cupboards, in which of several kinds of soap are kept. These are arranged in neat rows, and tremendous chests filled with soda and carbonate of soda are also to be seen.

The ordinary linen, consisting of towels, tablecloths, etc., arrives at the laundry in huge square baskets, and these they empty, the contents sorted, compared and checked with the lists accompanying them.

These persons are called the Royal Family is sorted in a special room, the wooden boxes containing it bearing brass plates upon which is inscribed the name of the person to whom the box, such as "The Queen, No. 10," "The Princess of Wales, No. 21," etc.

The washing apparatus is of the most perfect and recent manufacture and the wringing, drying, and mangling machines are of the latest type.

In every room order and the strictest cleanliness are observed, and the whole of the operations are conducted with clockwork regularity and despatch.

When the clothes are properly sorted, they are placed in baskets, each heap belonging to a different prince.

Most of the linen is practically marked with the letters "R. Q. & Co." in R. R. J. above, but some of the markings are now done with rubber hand stamps, and the date of the Royal linen wears, the date 1890 may be noticed on some of the tablecloths.

The pile of exquisite fineness special linen is enormous, and the number of signs are exceedingly pretty, consisting as they do of ingenious combinations of the letters of the alphabet and the rose, thistle, and the thistle, together with a number of Royal armorial bearings.

These signs will be gathered of the extent of the Royal Laundry when it is mentioned that the Queen's annual bill amounts to very nearly £6,000.

Ringworm.

Ringworm is a contagious disease of a parasitical nature, produced by a parasite which grows in the form of fungus. Its beginning and progress remind one of the spread of fire in a building. It starts at one point, it spreads outward in a more or less regular ring of reddish inflammation, subsiding in the centre as it spreads, and the centre of the ring is the source for its continuance at a single spot were soon exhausted.

The disease attacks the face, but is most commonly found on the face, the back of the hands and the scalp.

When it contracts it often takes adults, probably because their skin is more tender, and because peculiar opportunities are afforded for direct contact with the disease in some of the other places where children congregate. The disease is commonly spread by means of caps and other articles of clothing, and by combs.

When it attacks the scalp the hairs become brittle and twisted, and fall out, and the scalp becomes very rough, as though bitten or gnawed off.

Since ringworm is parasitical in its origin, it might be supposed that measures of simple cleanliness would remove it or prevent its occurrence; but this is not the case, and it is spread to some extent, its thorough removal is effected only by remedies directed at the destruction of the parasite.

This is a much more serious task than it would be if he growth of the fungus took place only on the surface of the skin. It is therefore important that the treatment should be directed to the peculiarities of the particular case.

It is the more important that professional advice should be sought, because the disease is often associated with a degree of pyrexia, and a diet of insufficient nutrition, and the disease is often permanent, and the recovery is often obtained when, in addition to proper medicinal treatment, the patient is sent to the sea for a time, though the distance may be slight.

It is written in a recent medical review, under the heading of "Ringworm in a school, rigid measures should be taken to prevent its spread, and the children, if apparently cured, is apt to recede, and is neglected to become more or less chronic." Youth's Companion.

VALUE OF A TONTINE POLICY.

Remarkable Cash Return, in View of the Fact that the Policy was on the "Ordinary Life" Form.

Hutland, Vt., April 13, 1893.

W. H. S. Whitcomb, General Agent, Burlington, Vt.

Dear me: I have the honor of the 13th inst. replying to your letter of the 13th inst. regarding my policy, and in reply to your quoting the results of my Equitable policy, has been received.

I am glad to hear that you are allowing figures, and they ought to be of service to you in obtaining new policies.

My policy is No. 51,830, and was issued May 27th 1873. It is an "Ordinary Life" policy for $1,000, and I am glad to hear that you are allowing figures, and they ought to be of service to you in obtaining new policies.

The statement from the Equitable Insurance Co. that I have the choice of cash surrendering my policy for $1,265 on the 27th of May next. For example, I may retain my policy for $1,000 and draw a cash dividend of $265; or I can surrender my policy for $1,265 of paid-up assurance; or I can surrender it for cash value, amounting to $1,265.

premiums paid to the company by my
during the last twenty years is only $62.40. The cash surrender value others me therefore, is a return of all the premiums paid, with interest on the cash exceeding 2 1/2 per cent per annum. I have decided to take the cash value, $627.32, and surrender policy.

DYSPEPSIA CURED.

GENTLEMEN.—I was troubled with dyspepsia for about four years. I noticed an advertisement of Burdock Blood-Purifiers, so I started to use it, and soon found that there is nothing so equal to it and took three bottles to effect a perfect cure in my case.

A LETTER FROM FIERSON.

I have used Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry and I think it is the best remedy for summer complaint. I have found a great deal of good to myself.

THE FOUR CARDINAL POINTS.

The four cardinal points of health are stomach, liver and blood. Wrong action in any of these produces disease. Burdock Blood Purifier acts upon the four cardinal points of health at one and the same time, to regulate, strengthen and purify, thus preventing health and removing disease.

A laugh is worth a hundred groans if

OFF IN EPILEPSY.

Lives of children are often endangered
by sudden and violent attacks of cholera morbus, diarrhoea, dysentery and bowel complaints. A reasonable and certain precaution is to keep Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry always on hand.

To succeed work hard, earnestly and incessantly.

UNBEARABLE AGONY.

For three days I suffered severely from summer complaint, nothing gave me relief and I kept getting worse until the pain was almost unbearable, but after taking the first dose of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry I found great relief and it did not fail to cure me.

condition for three years from Nervousness, Weakness of the Stomach, Dyspepsia and Indigestion until my health was gone. I bought one bottle of South American Nerve, which did me more good than any $50 worth of doctoring I ever had in my life. I would advise every weakly person to use this valuable and lovely remedy. I consider it the greatest medicine in the world." A trial

Recently they died in the State of New York an old man who had won from the gratitude of his fellows. He was Joseph Francis, the first person who made a life-boat in America. He was ninety-three years old; he was born before the advent of the nineteenth century, and it was not until he had reached the age of ninety that he received the honor of a gold medal from Congress, acknowledging and commemorating his services in saving the lives of his fellow-men.
